Former Dean of Elon University Speaks

Bill Rich, former dean of Elon University, was last week's guest speaker. Bill graduated from Wake Forest with a major in German. He received his Divinity Degree from South Eastern Seminary and his Ph.D. from Emory University. Bill worked at several universities, but he spent most of his career at Elon University where he began as a professor of religion, then worked in the dean's office as general studies director and dean of social studies .

In 1985 Bill began building a program called the study abroad and was promoted to Dean of International Studies—a program that brought national fame to Elon University. Bill retired in 2004 but before retiring, he made one last trip to London to teach the literature of religious pilgrimages.

Bill's titled his speech "Reflections on Elon University." He discussed the development of the University for its beginning in 1889 until the present. Bill's wife, Lela Faye was also employed by Elon. Both are now retired and enjoying the good life.
