Jordan Salter Envisions a New Role for Webb Library

It's been a year since Jordan Salter visited with us to talk about Webb Library and, in that time, a new vision has taken hold. Webb Library is currently managed by a part-time staffer at Morehead City's offices and is one project among all the other business that a city has to administer. In the absence of a strategic plan for the library, the City's objective has been "to keep the doors open".

Jordan is on the Board of Earl W. Webb Memorial Incorporated, the non-profit organization that owns the library. Their goal is to take back the management of the library with a strategic plan that is mission and business-oriented to provide focused and expanded services. As Jordan explained, libraries have evolved from simply being a book depository to include more education, computers and expanded social services. The non-profit is planning a $150-200k annual fund-raising campaign with $50k/year from both the City and County to support two full-time employees. They need donors of time, expertise and money. They are also working with the National Register of Historic Places for the future of this classic building.
