

As the official magazine of Rotary International, THE ROTARIAN is the prime vehicle of Rotary information printed in English. More than 530,000 Rotarians and others in 156 countries subscribe to the magazine. However, a large network of regional magazines assists in the vital task of bringing official news to the nearly 1.2 million Rotarians worldwide.

In recognition of Rotary Magazine Month in April, we invited the 28 editors of the regional magazine family to share their thoughts about Rotary's world press. Although we cannot accommodate all their messages in this issue, here is a global sampling.

—THE EDITORS

THE ROTARIAN reminds me of a giant starfish, except that instead of having only five legs, it has 28—the 28 regional magazines which radiate Rotary news and information into the homes of well over half a million Rotarians throughout the world.

What a unique and effective system of communications! Every regional magazine has its own character, its own appearance, its own culture—often its own language (22 of them).

And of course, each regional magazine adds local information to the official announcements that come from Rotary World Headquarters.

So perhaps Magazine Month is worth more than a passing thought. No other organisation can boast a similar network of magazines throughout the world.

- Deafness detection workshop. According to the Rotary Club of Bombay, 18 percent of India's children suffer from some degree of hearing loss. To combat the problem, the club sponsors workshops on detection and prevention for other clubs in R.I. District 3140. In the workshops, Rotarians learn the causes of hearing loss and examine methods for prevention.
